

SHKP combining wetland conservation with PARK YOHO to create rarity in the city Low-density green living coming to Kam Tin North landmark in Yuen Long

Hong Kong, 9 May 2017: Buyers will soon begin taking possession of units in PARK YOHO Venezia and PARK YOHO Sicilia by Sun Hung Kai Properties Limited (SHKP) in northern Kam Tin in Yuen Long. PARK YOHO takes in the natural beauty of Sha Po, including the lush 500,000-square-foot Fairyland wetland park that will be open to residents. The proximity of PARK YOHO to Fairyland will show residents the beauty of the seasons with verdant aquatic and terrestrial plants in spring, dragonflies and butterflies enlivening early summer, autumn scenes of vast swathes of golden reeds and the glide of migratory birds foraging in winter.

Arrangement of residences in harmony with rare wetland

SHKP Senior Project Manager Sunny Cheung said: “SHKP respects the woods and streams and the nature as a whole, so PARK YOHO was planned for low-density green living integrated with the surrounding environment to make the most of the geography in Sha Po. We noticed that a site was barren when we began planning, we commissioned independent ecologists to study the land and they concluded that it was once a wetland drawing dragonflies, butterflies and birds. SHKP believes in Building Homes with Heart so it worked with ecologists to restore the marsh and create ‘Fairyland’ as a demonstration of how to strike a balance between wetland conservation and residential development with careful planning.”

Living alongside over 180 species

SHKP joined hands with ecology specialists to dredge long-blocked water passages to bring seawater and hillside streams back to the sterile land and reintroduce reeds and mangroves so that the wetland gradually came back to life as a rare, semi-natural brackish marsh. Fairyland is currently home to over 180 species including the near-threatened four-spot midgets which named for their apple-green spots, Pallas’s leaf warblers with their beautiful songs, slender great and little egrets marked by their sharp beaks and variegated flutterers that resemble butterflies all coming together in a brilliant treat for observers. SHKP committed ample resources from the outset to ensuring that Fairyland will be self-sustaining with minimal cost of maintenance under regular monitoring by the conservation team.

Guided tours for close-up nature appreciation

There is a Discover & Re-discover publication explaining the history and process of restoring the Sha Po marsh and the full vitality of nature in Fairyland, accompanied by exquisite photos of the various species. PARK YOHO owners will receive copies of Discover & Re-discover so they can learn about wetlands and the environment surrounding them, and the clubhouse will arrange regular guided tours for residents, relatives and friends so they can see the rare brackish marsh close up and understand the importance of making conservation part of life.

1.2 million square feet of green

The landscaped area and wetland at PARK YOHO cover over 1.2 million square feet and make up more than 60% of the site area, with two large ornamental lakes by the main entrance featuring cascading waterfalls and aquatic plants. The residential towers are close to the greenery. COMO Garden covering more than 40,000 square feet is a notable stretch of the green area, with plants and seasonal flowers growing at different heights and an extensive lawn unlike other developments where residents can soak up the sun or picnic amid the greenery.

Open views of nature

SHKP pays close attention to detail in its developments and used extensive insulated glass in PARK YOHO. Standard units have balconies spanning nearly the width of the living and dining rooms with full-length sliding glass doors. Over 90% of master bedrooms have corner or convection windows for better ventilation, more sun and open views with a thoughtful design that affords each unit a view overlooking the extensive greenery and water features. None of the units have bay windows to give a greater sense of space, and over 90% have windows in the bathrooms, plus comprehensive amenities. SHKP's inter-departmental handover team checked more than a hundred items in each PARK YOHO unit at least three times before handing over to buyers, who will have the benefit of the developer's three-year warranty on new residential projects.

Two clubhouses and full facilities

The Club COMO and Club GARDA clubhouses give PARK YOHO a distinctive Italian flair and lifestyle. Club COMO features a 25-metre-long outdoor pool and a 25-metre-long heated indoor pool, plus aqua bikes. Aqua cycling is popular in many countries as buoyancy in water reduces joint stress in users and resistance increases the calories used and impact of training. Separately, the clubhouse food and beverage zone is elegantly furnished and offers a selection of quality dining.

Special green lifestyle

PARK YOHO is near the popular Nam Sang Wai, Tai Sang Wai and Kai Kung Leng hiking and cycling routes, and its clubhouse will cooperate with local shops to offer bike rental service to residents. Additionally, hiking and cycling tours will be organized so residents can enjoy exercise in the countryside.

75,000-square-foot mall serving residents

PARK CIRCLE, the 75,000-square-foot retail area in PARK YOHO, will cater for residents' every need in a space imbued with nature behind full-length windows letting in sunlight and views of the landscaped area to relax shoppers. A supermarket, convenience store and restaurants are already open, and future occupants will include a noted international kindergarten, bakery, snack shop, laundry, salon, personal care and pet product outlets.
